

Which One Is Different?

Sample Question:

In each succeeding group of images, identify the image that is least like the other three. In the sample below, three of the images have corners and sides. The circle does not, and is consequently least like the other three. The correct answer is C.

A

B

C

D

1.

A. Budweiser

B. Sauvignon Blanc

C. Sierra Nevada

D. Guinness

Correct answer: B - Wine. What clueless idiot lets 13% alcohol work for him when you can slowly fill up on suds and spend half the night draining it in the john waiting patiently for the real buzz to kick in?

2.

A. Bart Starr

B. Joe Montana

C. Ken Stabler

D. Kurt Warner

Correct Answer: A - Bart Starr. All four QBs are Super Bowl winners and legends, but only Bart Starr accomplished the holy grail: winning for just one head coach. The gritty Starr looked Lisle Blackbourn, Ray McLean, Phil Bengston, and Dan Devine straight in the eye and said, "Look chump, I win for one coach and one coach only: Lombardi." That's why he's CHFF's number one quarterback of all time.

3.

A. Dr. Z

B. Frank Deford

C. Peter King

D. Kerry Byrne

Correct Answer: D - Kerry Byrne. While other self-important dinosaurs wrestle with political agendas and hide behind the arrogance of their publishers, it's sports internet pioneer Byrne, smart enough to exploit the lowest common denominator and throw in a few numbers to make it look real, who is zig zagging around them to relevance. It's not that Byrne is supplanting Woodward and Bernstein, it's that, in today's world, who needs 'em?

4.

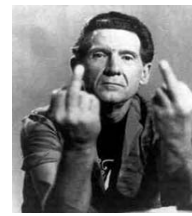

A.. Alan Jackson

B. Chuck Berry

C. The Beach Boys

D. Jerry Lee Lewis

Correct Answer: A - Alan Jackson. The American Experience. It's not the girl chasing, road tripping guitar noodlings of Chuck Berry. It's not the endless summer of hot rods, sand and chicks of The Beach Boys. It's not the fuck-you horny individualism of Jerry Lee Lewis. It's Alan Jackson's cleverly crafted and marketed sentimentality. Excuse me, I seem to have a speck of dust in my eye.

5.

A. John Wayne

B. Charles Bronson

C. Patrick Swayze

D. Clint Eastwood

Correct answer: C - Swayze. All four are successful hollywood stars, but what separates Swayze from The Duke's rugged masculinity, Bronson's tough guy looks, and Eastwood's morally ambiguous anti-hero are his skills as an accomplished dancer and his romantic lead chops. Now that's a he-man. Only a trained eye can spot the difference.

6.

A. Bill Walsh

B. Jimmy Johnson

C. Chuck Noll

D. Dick Vermeil

Correct Answer: B - Jimmy Johnson All four are Super Bowl winning coaches, but wine enthusiasts Walsh, Noll and Vermeil are screaming milquetoasts! We hear former Cowboys coach Johnson likes Heineken over ice. Atta boy! Maybe he can give them directions to the man side of town.

7.

A. Chad Pennington

B. Brett Favre

C. Jay Fiedler

D. John Elway

Correct answer: A - Pennington. Sorry Favre (4-3 vs. Patriots, including Super Bowl), sorry Fiedler (4-5 vs. Patriots), sorry Elway (11-0 vs. Patriots), your starting records aren't quite bad enough. Only Pennington, 3-7 career starting vs. New England, qualifies for the honor of being singled out by Cold, Hard Football Facts as having played "historically well" against New England. Now that's what MVPs are made of! Patriots cornerbacks...don't say we didn't warn you.

Scoring: Give yourself 1 point for each correct answer. Total points:

- 7 - Spinmaster extraordinaire. Deserving of CHFF highest ranking.
- 4-6 - Superior. Potential future in corporate finance or marketing.
- 2-3 - You're at a moral crossroads.
- 0-1 - Too honest. Maybe there's a nice job for you in a non-profit somewhere.
